BIT OF GUNPLAY IS THREATENED

Mrs. Lot Holman Goes to Home of
Mrs. Sarah Richie to Recover
18 Stolen Turkeys.

SHE IS MET WITH REBUFF

When Mrs. Richie Draws Revolver,
Mrs. Holman Whips Out One and Tosses Dare.

FORMER HOISTS WHITE FLAG

Owner First Locates Turkeys by Clever Detective Work—Gets
Only 4 of Them.

The fact that Mrs. Sarah Richie, a comely widow who formerly lived near Milroy, but who now resides a few miles below New Salem, has a reputation among her neighbors for pilfering hen coops, led Mrs. Lot Holman, residing two miles west of New Salem, to suspect that Mrs. Richie might have been responsible for the theft of eighteen fine young turkeys which disappeared from her coop about two weeks ago.

Yesterday, loaded for bear, Mrs. Holman journeyed to the home of Mrs. Richie in quest of her property, after having played the part of a detective Tuesday and located them Mrs. Richie showed fight according to Mrs. Holman, and drew a revolver, but Mrs. Holman, according to her own declaration, told the alleged thief that she was prepared for just such maneuvers.

Mrs. Holman said she had a gun in the back of her buggy and when she started after it when Mrs. Richie showed fight, the latter hoisted the white flag and was ready to offer conciliatory terms. She produced four of the eighteen turkeys Mrs. Holman lost, but declared that she had no more of them.

But there promised to be a bit of gunplay last night according to the neighbors down that way, as a direct result of the visit of Mrs. Holman to the Richie home. According to Mrs. Holman, the neighbors down Mrs. Richie's wall all fear for her and when Mrs. Richie left home last night in her buggy, the story was started that Mrs. Richie was going to "get" Mrs. Holman.

The neighborhood was in an uproar. The route taken by Mrs. Richie was followed by the keen eyes of the vigilant housewives all along the line of battle. They kept Mrs. Holman informed as to the maneuvers of the enemy. When Mrs. Richie passed a farmhouse, the occupant would call Mrs. Holman by telephone and tell her of the exact location of Mrs. Richie on the way.

Mrs. Holman maintained this morning that she was not frightened, even though neighbors along the line were warning her by telephone that Mrs. Richie was on the warpath and headed in her direction. Mrs. Holman said she had her "bluff" in first.

But the fancied visit of Mrs. Richie did not take place. Mrs. Richie stopped in New Salem, as it was afterwards learned, to talk about the sale of her farm. New Salem scouts were on Mrs. Richie's trail, watching her every moment to see if she were going to start toward Holman's, and if she did, to warn Mrs. Holman.

Whether or not it disappointed the amateur detectives, Mrs. Richie started back south toward her home, but they were not content with that. It is declared that the bluff worked successfully by Mrs. Holman has greatly strengthened the nerve of the neighbors who had formerly been terror-stricken, and five or six of them trailed Mrs. Richie down the road last night on her return home, determined, it is said, to learn if she were then intent on any nightly visits to chicken yards.

It has been about two weeks since Mrs. Holman missed 18 fine young turkeys of fancy pedigree. They were highly valued by her, and a few days after the supposed theft, she announced that she would give $25 for their return. In the meantime Mrs. Holman had assumed the role of the strategist, and did a little "sleuthing" on her own account.

When Mrs. Holman heard of the reputation of Mrs. Richie, she paused

MACHINE CRASHES INTO LARGE STONE

John Walker Loses Control of Auto and it Backs Against Pillar at Court House.

MOVES WEIGHT OF 800 POUNDS

John C. Walker of the firm of Maibaugh and Walker created considerable excitement last evening when his automobile got from under his control and backed into one of the large stones at the foot of the court house steps at the north entrance. Mr. Walker was learning to run the auto and at the time was attempting to turn around. He had pulled into the alley by the Caldwell store and expected to get squared around by backing out. He put on the reverse and at the same time gave it all the gas it would stand. As a result he shot out of the alley at about forty miles per hour and before it could be stopped, backed across over the curb stone and across the sidewalk crashing into the stone.

The force of the collision moved the cap stone, weighing seven or eight hundred pounds about four inches out of line. Only slight damage resulted to the machine. The rear lamp was broken and the top smashed slightly. The remarkable thing about the accident was that the auto was not damaged more than it was after hitting with a force hard enough to move a stone of that size.

WATSON WILL TAKE STUMP FOR TICKET

Announces in Washington, After Conference With National Chairman,
That he Will Aid.

HADLEY'S HELP TO BE ASKED

Former Representative James E. Watson of Indiana will stump the country for the Taft-Sherman ticket, says a Washington dispatch. This announcement was made today after Mr. Watson had a conference with C. D. Hillis, the new Republican national chairman.

Mr. Watson has not always been an ardent Taft man. Just prior to the recent Chicago national convention he created much gossip by advocating the nomination of a dark horse, but later he blossomed out as leader of the Taft forces on the floor of the convention.

Tonight Mr. Watson confirmed the report that he was to tour the country for Taft and Sherman, but said that no arrangements had been made as to speaking dates. Governor Hadley of Missouri, who was the convention floor leader for the Roosevelt forces, but who has announced his determination to support Taft, also will be asked to make a nation-wide tour.

INCENDIARY SAID TO BE THE CAUSE

St. Paul is Visited by Another Disastrous Fire Which Had Mysterious Origin.

DR. J. W. BELL'S HOUSE BURNS

Man and Wife Narrowly Escape With Lives—Mrs. Bell's Hair Burned Off.

St. Paul was hard hit by fire again when the residence of Dr. J. W. Bell was destroyed yesterday, and there seems every reason for believing that the same mysterious influence that has caused a number of destructive fires in the town during the past few years is responsible for the present calamity. Mrs. Bell came near losing her life and she is in a serious condition from burns received as she was making her escape from one of the upper rooms of the house.

Caught in the stairway by the flames and smoke her hair was fired and most of it burned from her head while her face and arms were badly blistered. Dr. Bell's escape was also a narrow one, and he received burns little less serious than those of his wife. They were asleep in their rooms at one o'clock yesterday morning when both were awakened by the progress of the flames and both dashed for the stairway to escape from the building. In spite of his own burns Dr. Bell turned his attention to his wife as soon as he had succeeded in arousing his neighbors.

There is only one way in which the fire may be accounted for along natural lines and that is that there may have been a leak in the gas pipes somewhere about the house. This could have been set ablaze by lights that had been left burning in the dining room. Most people who were on the scene early voiced the opinion that the house had been fired by an enemy of the doctor or by some one who is bent on wiping the town out of existence as several fires have occurred in St. Paul recently in which no reasonable cause could be assigned for the starting of the blaze.

The house was totally destroyed and all of the contents of the lower rooms were carried to safety by persons who arrived on the scene early.

The bucket brigade soon turned its attention to the fire, but it was soon evident that the house could not be saved as the flames were confined at first exclusively to the upper rooms, and the fire fighters turned their attention to saving the neighboring residences of Fred W. Avery and Clarence Greely. Both buildings were scorched by the heat from Dr. Bell's home, but the damage was not very great.

The building burned was formerly the Benjamin Jenkins homestead, but it had been remodeled recently by Dr. Bell for his residence and office, and it was probably worth $2,000. Dr. Bell carried insurance to the extent of $1,200.

Those who believe that the fire was of incendiary nature form their opinion by the fact that shortly before one o'clock Fred W. Avery, whose home is on the west of the Bell home, heard some person or persons in the alley between the two houses. Mr. Avery said he heard some one emit what he calls "a gruff Indian whoop." This was followed by two or three pistol shots. Mr. Avery then went to the window facing the Bell home, and saw the ceiling and wall of the west room on fire. He called his folks and went to the aid of the Bells.

On the other hand, those who believe the fire was caused by a gas leak state that Clarence Greely fired his

Ex-Governor Hoch of Kansas Says
Reforms Can Best be Fought
For in Party.

GIVES LECTURE AT MUNCIE

Chautauqua Orator Who Will Appear
Here Doesn't Agree With T. R. in All Things.

E. W. Hoch, former governor of Kansas, who will deliver his celebrated lecture, "A Message From Kansas" on Friday afternoon of the chautauqua here, appeared at the Muncie chautauqua this week, and gave the same lecture. Newspaper reporters managed to get an interview from the former governor in which he declared against the "Bull Moose" party as follows:

"Personally I am not in favor of a new party. I believe that the great reforms can be carried out better within the ranks than by forming a new party. We progressives have made great progress within the Republican party and the party is bound to meet the popular demand. In Kansas we will go on reforming in the old way, for we are satisfied with the things we have done. I took the same stand on the prohibition question that the matter could be settled better in the old parties than by finding a new one which had but one common plank. And time has proved me right. We have prohibition and effective prohibition in Kansas today. Democrats and Republicans alike are for it. Now, other reforms can be carried out in the same way.

"If you form a new party with one central idea you will gather up all the political riff-raff in the way of theories. Some of your men will be free traders and others protectionists, and the result will be that you will get nowhere.

"Personally you know I am a Republican progressive. I believe in progressive politics. But I do not agree with Mr. Roosevelt in all things. I believe the proposition to permit the people to vote on judicial decisions is a piece of political tomfoolery.

"But don't think for a minute that we are going to go trailing off in any third party movement, for we are through with that. We cast it off when we cast off populism. Why, there isn't a more ardent prohibitionist in Kansas than I am, yet when the Prohibition party was threatening to sweep the State, and when I really was in sympathy with their anti-liquor platform, I still figured that it was a one-idea party, and that as a Republican I should not follow strange gods, but rather, should try to accomplish great reforms within my own party and through it. I was denounced in those days, just as original Republicans are being talked down now, as being insincere, but I lived to see the Republican party accomplish sanely, in Kansas, what others were attempting to accomplish inanely. Don't hesitate to quote me as against the Roosevelt third party movement, but say that in Kansas we accomplish big things through the Republican party.

"And our prohibition law is a success, too. There is not an open saloon in Kansas. There are some blind tigers and bootleggers, of course, but relatively speaking the law is a great success. Everyone admits it. I think Topeka is the cleanest and soberest city of its size in the world. Kansas City, Kan., is the largest saloonless town on the globe. Kansas City, Mo., just across the street, is very wet, and yet even under these conditions the merchants of the Kansas town are prosperous and advertise their community as a prohibition town.

in the Kansas City and St. Louis papers. And all of this in spite of the fact that a man can haul a wheelbarrow load of beer across the street into the Kansas side under the interstate commerce laws. Why, a man in Kansas City, Kan., can yell his order across the street into Missouri and have it delivered in a wheelbarrow. Uncle Sam will have to change this condition or something will happen. "Prohibition can not be a success in two years. We have experimented with the liquor question for over 20 years and it has taken all this time to get matters properly adjusted. But it came at last and now everyone is satisfied. There will be no resubmission of the question in Kansas. People do not want it."

START SEARCH FOR LOST DAUGHTER

Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Doughty Ask Police Aid in Locating Mrs.
Maude Rogers.

THEY TRACE HER TO CHICAGO

Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Doughty of Rushville come to this city Wednesday on a search for their daughter, Mrs. Maude Rogers, a widow, thirty-three years old, who disappeared from her home in Rushville last week, says the Indianapolis News. Mrs. Rogers left a note addressed to her parents, in which she said she was going away and that they would never see her again. They traced her to this city, and city detectives learned that she stopped at the Hotel Royal in North Illinois street.

A bellboy at the Royal said he carried her grip to the union station for her and that she bought a ticket to Chicago. Her parents went to Chicago to ask the police of that city to aid them in their search. They said that Mrs. Rogers is affected with a nervous trouble which causes her to wander, and Mr. Doughty said he had spent a fortune in trying to cure her of the nervous trouble.

HAS TROUBLE IN "UNCROSSING" EYES

Celia Coers of Blue Ridge Tries Trick to Amuse Friend and Strains Nerve.

SUFFERS VERY SEVERE PAIN

For the amusement of her friend, Miss Mary Oakley of Shelbyville, Miss Celia Coers of Blue Ridge, while visiting in Shelbyville yesterday, looked cross-eyed for an instant. But when she was ready to turn her eyes to their natural position, she was astonished to find that they were riveted in the crossed position. It required the services of a physician for several hours before the girl began to improve.

When she attempted to "undo" her eyes and failed, pains began to form about her eyeballs. They grew more severe as time wore on. The flesh around her eyes turned blue. For a time it was feared the doctor would be unable to restore the eyeballs to their normal position. The physician said that the girl had strained her optic nerves in doing the trick, and that it might have been more serious even than it was.

Judge Alonzo Blair of Shelbyville was here today on business. He came to make up the court calendar for the September term of the Rush circuit court.

MAN WITH CHECK LANDS IN JAIL

William Downard of Manilla Finally Gets Drunk in Shelbyville—
Couldn't Stand Prosperity.

BUT HE HAD GUARDIAN ANYWAY

Subsequent events have proved that Phil Miller was really a guardian angel at an opportune time for William Downard of near Manilla, in refusing to deliver to Downard a check for $195 which the latter had lost in this city Tuesday after purchasing a suit of clothes at the Miller store, says the Shelbyville Democrat. The stand assumed by Miller in the case created somewhat of a sensation in police circles and among some friends of the man who were anxious for him to cash the check so that some business deals could be negotiated with him.

At the time Miller found the check he insisted that Downard was drunk and in no condition to be trusted with the money the check would bring, and in spite of the threats and entreaties of the police and friends of the man, Miller had the check locked up in a desk at the office of Prosecuting Attorney Cheney.

Downard also remained in the city over night. Whether he was drunk or not Tuesday, he was completely soused Wednesday and the officers found it necessary to put him in jail. He will probably need part of the check to settle his fine and costs.

FARM AND BEES

HOW BEES COLLECT POLLEN

Important Part Played by the Auricle in the Process—Dust Gathers on Body Hairs.

The pollen dust gathers on the body hairs of the bees as the result of the visits paid to the flowers. These hairs, as seen under the microscope, are branched, and therefore are admirably adapted to hold the pollen, writes F. W. L. Sladen in the Gleanings in Bee Culture.

In the bumble bee (and probably also the honey bee) the pollen dust in the hairs on the thorax is collected on brushes on the inner sides of the metatarsi, or basal joint of the foot, of the middle pair of legs, which are moistened with honey from the tongue to make the dust cohere. The pollen dust in the hair on the abdomen is collected on brushes on the inner sides of the metatarsi of the hind legs, and this is probably moistened by rubbing the hind legs together.

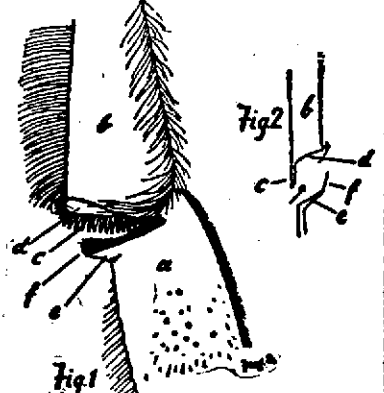

Fig. 1—Junction of tibia and metatarsus in hind leg of worker honey bee, outer side.

After this the pollen is transferred to the corbicula (or pollen-basket) on the tibiae of the hind legs, where, as every one knows, it accumulates into a great lump as the result of repeated contributions from the metatarsi. But how does it get there? It is evident, as Cheshire observed, that the pollen on the right metatarsus is transferred to the left corbicula, and the pollen on the left metatarsus is transferred to the right corbicula. Cheshire supposed ("Bees and Beekeeping," 1886) that the metatarsus discharges its pollen on the corbicula by scraping its brush on the upper side of the tibia; but I find that this is not the case. The pollen is scraped off the metatarsal brush by a comb (c) situated at the end of the tibia on the inside, and it passes into a small concave receiver (d) that joins the comb; then, when the leg is straightened, a projection on the metatarsus called the auricle (e) closes upon the receiver, compresses the pollen, and at the same time forces it out to the lower end of the corbicula, which is here slightly depressed and almost wholly devoid of hairs. The compression of the pollen in the receiver is an essential part of the process; for loose pollen grains such as occur on the metatarsal brushes would not hold together in the corbicula. In the bumble bee the angle between the surface of the receiver and that of the corbicula is obtuse, and the compressed pollen easily passes from the one to the other; but in the honey bee there is a sharp angle at the corner, and the auricle bears a fringe of hairs (f) to guide the stream of pollen to the corbicula; also the honey bee's auricle is evidently pressed back by the pollen, for it has no other means of escape.

POST PULLER SAVES LABOR

Implement Can Be Made of Strong Tongue Taken From Some Discarded Farm Machine.

When a fence must be moved a good post puller saves an unmerciful lot of back ache and time, writes Gilbert F. Parrish in the Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Such a lifter can be made of a strong tongue from some discarded farm machine. A strap of five-eighths iron is made into a heavy claw at one end and bolted on the tongue so that the claw projects beyond the end of the tongue. A heavy ring with a stout chain attached is also a part of the outfit. The ring is put over the post down to the ground. The claws are caught under a link of the chain and a block put under the pole as a fulcrum. This leverage will raise the post with very little effort. Every farm ought to have such a lifter. The parts should be solid and strong, for the strain is tremendous.

LAWYERS TAKE NEW DEPARTURE

Place Woman On Their Association Program.

GAVE HER CLOSE ATTENTION

Mrs. Benedict, a Milwaukee Lawyer, Was One of the Star Speakers at the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the Indiana State Bar Association, Being the First Woman Thus Honored in the Association's History.

South Bend, Ind., July 11.—For the first time in its history, the Indiana State Bar association gave a place on its program to a woman, at the sixteenth annual convention in this city, before an audience that included the judges of the supreme and appellate courts, as well as prominent members of the legal profession from all parts of the state. Mrs. Crystal Eastman Benedict of Milwaukee, formerly a practicing attorney in New York city, gave an address on the subject, "Political recognition of Women the Next Step in the Development of Democracy."

For more than an hour Mrs. Benedict, who is a young woman of striking beauty, argued the cause of woman's suffrage before the lawyers of Indiana. Finally, when she concluded speaking, she answered many questions asked by judges and attorneys in the audience.

REED LOSES CASE

Accused Dynamiter Must Remain in Jail or Give Heavy Bond.

Columbus, Ind., July 11.—Enzer Reed, charged with blowing up the heating plant of the school building at Hope, and with various other crimes, will have to remain in jail or give $5,100 bond, Judge Wickens of circuit court having refused to reduce the amount at the conclusion of the hearing on the writ of habeas corpus.

Testimony was introduced to prove Reed's confession. The witnesses were Simeon W. Norton, postmaster at Hope, and Arthur May, a member of the Hope school board. They told of a visit to a hotel at Indianapolis, where, by looking through a hole in a door they saw Reed talking with a detective and heard him tell the detective that he was implicated in the blowing up of the heating plant.

Reed's attorneys succeeded in learning all of the important testimony of the state and they know about what they will have to face when the case is called for trial.

Didn't Count the Flies.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 11.—Five gallons of flies were "trapped" by four boys in this city in a week. They are winners of a prize which was offered by a committee from several civic bodies. It was the intention to hold weekly contests, but the secretary of the city board of health declined to count the flies, and interest in the contest was allowed to wane. However, the four boys continued their work, but the number they caught is not known.

Met Death in Shallow Water.

Lafayette, Ind., July 11.—Andrew Gee, nineteen years old, was drowned in eight inches of water, in Colburn. The young man, who was afflicted with epilepsy, was wading in the water and fell unconscious with his head just beneath the surface. No help was near and he died where he fell.

Victim of Lightning.

Marion, Ind., July 11.—Fred Snyder, twenty-seven years old, was killed instantly, and Fred Osborn, twenty-five years old, was rendered unconscious when a bolt of lightning struck a barn in which they had taken refuge, near Amboy. They were eating their noon-day lunch when lightning struck them.

Valparaiso Student Drowned.

Valparaiso, Ind., July 11.—James Pointon, aged twenty-four, and a resident of Old Forge, Pa., ventured into the waters of Sager lake here with three companions, members of the civil engineering class of Valparaiso university, and was drowned, despite efforts of partners to save him.

Was Financially Worried.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 11.—John E. Turner, forty-four years old, who arrived in the city from Bozeman, Mont., for a visit to his mother, committed suicide at her home by firing a bullet through his brain. Financial troubles are believed to have led to the suicide.

Cattle Caught on Track.

Coatesville, Ind., July 11.—Ernest McHaffie bought a carload of cattle at Indianapolis and shipped them here. Driving them home, the cattle stampeded and ran east on the Vandavia track. The midnight express killed twenty-one and crippled seven.

A Luckless Sportsman.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., July 11.—Samuel C. Thornton, aged twenty-three, living in Logan township, accidentally discharged a load of shot into his right foot while hunting squirrels. It is probable that the foot will have to be amputated.

AMERICANS DO NOT DO QUITE SO WELL

Fourth Day at Olympia Was a Disappointment.

Stockholm, July 11.—Of all the exciting days that have rendered the present meeting the greatest in athletic history, records and surprises in abundance made the fourth day of the Olympic contests the most noteworthy. Chief was the defeat of America's great quintette of middle distance runners in the 1,500-meter final by the young English collegian, A. N. S. Jackson of Oxford. A sweep for America was confidently looked for in this event, and when the Englishman headed Kiaviat and Taber at the finish there was gloom in the camp which even the landing of all three places in the shot put could not entirely dispel.

Even in the shot put there was a big surprise, though it did not affect the scoring for America. The event had by general consent been conceded in advance to the Los Angeles giant, but though scarcely a David in size, Pat McDonald, the modest New York policeman, metaphorically slew the Goliath of the shot-putting world and finished in first place, making the new Olympic record of 50 feet 4 inches. Rose was only the extra four inches behind, and third place fell to L. A. Whitney of the Boston A. A.

In the 5,000 meters final Kolehmainen of Sweden finished first and Bouin of France second. The shock for American came when George Bonhag was beaten out at the tape by Hutson of England for third place. The winner of the 5,000 was forced to run in Olympic record time, the figures of 14 minutes 36.3 seconds constituting a new world's record. There was some consolation for the defeat of the American distance runners in the grand showing made by the sprinters and pole vaulters. In the preliminary heats of the 200 meter race there were eighteen heats and in eight Americans flashed by the judges first. This percentage was well maintained in the semi-final contests, and all but two were won by the speedy sprinters from America.

Lincoln Beachey, the aviator, and his pretty young wife, May, have been reconciled. As a result Mrs. Beachey will discontinue her suit for divorce.

BECOMING MORE CONFUSED DAILY

Republicans Face Perplexing Electoral Question.

"THOU SHALT NOT STEAL"

This Commandment Has Been Hurlled at the Tafters by the Teddy Fans, but Now the President's Followers Are Going to Hurl It Right Back Into the Teeth of Their Oyster Bay Tormentor.

Washington, July 11.—Becoming more confused every day is the situation confronting President Taft and the regular Republican organization. The president's political advisers are fully reconciled to the fact now that Colonel Roosevelt hopes for success through the manipulation of the presidential electors. "Thou shalt not steal" is one of the commandments often quoted these days at Oyster Bay. It is apparent now that the same commandment is to be hurled at Roosevelt by the Taft people, who are getting ready to accuse him of planning to "steal" the election through preventing a fair selection of electoral votes in many of the states.

This question of electors really is assuming alarming proportions for the Taft people.

All told there are close to 100 electors who are Roosevelt men, but whose names will be on the regular Republican tickets. Many of these electors have said flatly that they would vote for Roosevelt, and most of the others are leaning toward that course of action.

This situation means that Mr. Taft either has got to run his chances by accepting the Roosevelt electors nominated by regular Republican state organizations, or else he will have to put up an independent set of electors in the field. Several serious conferences have been held at the White House in regard to the growing mixup over Republican electors. The conferences related chiefly to Kansas, South Dakota, Pennsylvania, California, West Virginia and other states in which the confusion has already developed or is imminent.

Chairman Hillis of the Republican national committee and his advisers hope to settle on a definite plan of campaign in regard to the electors at their meeting in New York on July 13.

ENGINEER DRUNK

Booze Must Bear the Blame for Horrid Wreck on Lackawanna.

Corning, N. Y., July 11.—That Engineer Schroeder, who drove Lackawanna express No. 11 upon the morning of July 4 to its fearful crash into passenger No. 9, killing forty passengers and maiming many others, was almost solely at fault, seems to be the trend of the evidence before the coroner's inquest. That he was probably in no condition to take the throttle of the morning of July 4 is the general opinion, after hearing the testimony of Charles Klapproth and William Flasey, two saloon keepers of Elmira. It appears that Schroeder was drinking on the night of July 3; that he was intoxicated so that he staggered, was wrung from Klapproth, who is a warm personal friend of Schroeder's. That was at 12:30 o'clock in the morning, and he expected to be called at 3:30 to take out his limited train for her run.

Convention Went 580 Ballots.

Paoli, Ind., July 11.—The Republican judicial convention for the circuit composed of Washington and Orange counties, after having balloted 580 times, selected James L. Tucker of Washington county as the nominee. Two candidates from Orange and two from Washington county were before the convention.

Battle in the Yaqui Valley.

Tucson, Ariz., July 11.—According to advices received here, 200 Mexican federal soldiers and 600 Yaqui Indians met in battle at Potam, in the Yaqui valley. One hundred Yaquis were killed, while Lieutenant Colonel De Mott and six federal soldiers died.

Wilson Returns to Sea Girt.

Sea Girt, N. J., July 11.—After making two speeches at Atlantic City, Governor Woodrow Wilson returned to Sea Girt last night to plunge again into the business of running for the presidency of the United States.

HERBERT KNOX SMITH

Commissioner of Corporations Pursued by Resignation Rumor.

SMITH MAY FOLLOW PINCHOT'S EXAMPLE

Commissioner of Corporations Is Champing the Bit.

Washington, July 11.—A report has started here, based on the visit of Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, to Roosevelt, that he is about to resign, if he has not already done so. It is believed by some of Mr. Smith's colleagues in the department of commerce and labor that he has responded to the call of the wild and will be one of the active ones at the third party convention in Chicago.

Aroused His Resentment.

When President Taft successfully placed the responsibility for failure to prosecute the harvester trust on Col. Roosevelt by making public letters signed by Mr. Smith in his official capacity, Mr. Smith, it is said, with difficulty was restrained from making a statement which would have compelled the president to remove him in the same manner that Gifford Pinchot was removed.

OLD BOMBO'S GOLD

London Syndicate Claims to Have Located Pirate's Cave.

London, July 11.—A syndicate has secured a steamer for a treasure hunting expedition to Cocos island, which will start out this week. The principal members of the party, including Mrs. Barrie Till and Miss J. Brockley Davis, will join the expedition at Panama. These women, who were with the Navajo expedition which returned from Cocos island a year ago and said nothing had been found but three skeletons, claim to have located a cave in which the pirate Bombo buried $100,000,000 worth of gold which he had seized from the Spaniards.

REALIZE ROAD DRAG'S VALUE

Connersville Man Makes One and Proves Its Worth by Use on Streets.

SPLIT LOG DRAG IS SIMPLE

Consists of Two Halves of Log Set on Edge With Flat Face Forward.

The split log drag, lately constructed at the direction of E. W. Ansted for trial use on local roads, was given a test on one of the streets in the factory district, says the Connersville News. The drag consists, briefly described, of the two halves of a split log, set on edge with their flat faces forward, and about three feet apart. They are connected by strong iron bolts, and also by a light platform, on which the driver is supposed to stand. The whole contrivance is so set as to pull at an angle, thus throwing the earth which it encounters toward the rear end of the moving parallel.

The street selected for the test was about as unfavorable for any operation as could well be selected. It was made of river gravel, which consisted mostly of large boulders and fine sand, without enough earth in it to pack. Moreover, the light rains of yesterday had little more than dampened the surface of this poor material.

Yet laboring against these disadvantages, and further, that the driver had had no experience in the use of a split log drag, a tremendous improvement in the condition of a quarter of a mile of the street was made in an hour. From a string of loose, wheel-rutted and unsightly gravel it changed into a comparatively smooth and rounded driveway. In the center a string of small boulders remained—the fault of the material not of the drag. But elsewhere the surface was comparatively smooth, and was in very good condition for travel.

Brief and incomplete as this test was it has sufficed to raise the value of the log drag vastly in the estimation of those who saw its results. Under more favorable conditions it will be used again, and it is expected that by the time D. Ward King arrives from Missouri the people in general will have become well enough acquainted with the device and its uses to fully appreciate what he will have to say.

For a number of church conferences will be held at Winona Lake during July and August, and the latter part of August will witness the meeting of the Winona Bible conference, the largest in the world.

The Presbyterian young people will hold their fifth annual summer conference at Winona Lake July 13 to 20. Some of the leaders of this denomination will be present and make addresses.

The Young Friends of America will meet at Winona for the third time July 20 to 28, and take up work of interest to this denomination. Many Indiana Friends will speak.

From August 11 to the end of the Winona assembly season the Christian Citizenship Institute will be held at Winona Lake under the auspices of the National Reform association.

Following this comes the Bible conference, at which men from both hemispheres will speak.

OPERA EVERY FRIDAY

William Dodd Chenery Writes New Story in Song.

Soloists Who Presented "Egypta" and "Ahasuerus" Will Return to Take Part in Big Winona Feature.

William Dodd Chenery, who compiled "Egypta," the sacred opera given in many parts of the Middle West and presented it at Winona Lake in 1910, and who also compiled the sacred opera "Ahasuerus" given at Winona Lake in 1911, and presented later in many cities of the middle west, has prepared a new sacred opera for Winona Assembly, Winona Lake, Ind., for the 1912 season. This new opera is "Joseph," the plot being found in the Bible in the dramatic and "heart-interest" story of the son of Jacob who was sold into Egypt.

It takes two classes of work to produce an opera that will be popular with the public—the opera itself and the proper presentation of that opera. Mr. Chenery has had two seasons before Winona audiences, and knows what Winonans want. His name connected with such an entertainment as "Joseph" insures its success, so far as the merits of the opera is concerned.

The soloists who took part in "Egypta" and in "Ahasuerus" will take part in "Joseph." These include some of the best lyceum talent of the country—George Ashley Brewster, L. L. Kemper, Fred Calvert, W. H. Collier, Heman Powers, Haydn Owens, Helen Cutler Dicker and Miss Stuart.

Earning Money

"I never before realized how rich I am!" declared the little stenographer. "Last Wednesday evening I discovered, to my amazement, that Croesus and I are in the same class."

"Tell me about it," said the book-keeper. "The firm profits so greatly by our invaluable services that we are entitled to relax a little in business hours."

"It was the Ladies' Aid society," explained the little stenographer. "About a month ago the president requested each one of us to bring five dollars to be earned by our individual efforts. The money was to be provided in one month from that day. It was for a special purpose and we all promised that we'd do as requested."

"There aren't many other girls in that society. They're mostly married women. So they talked and talked and wondered how on earth they could earn five dollars apiece. They went on that way for two hours after the meeting was over. You see, they weren't supposed to bring any money that was given them—so they couldn't ask their husbands to help them."

"Well, last Wednesday evening the month was up. Of course, I just took a five dollar bill that I'd saved from my last check, so I was perfectly safe. If I hadn't earned it myself I wouldn't have been able to bring it!"

"We got there rather early—every one was anxious to see if every one else had brought five dollars. And oh, they looked so worn out and tired, and some of them even looked cross!"

"When the meeting began we all began to tell how the money was earned—and that's what gives me my wealthy sensation!"

"You know Mrs. Ward. Her husband owns nearly half the city, I believe, and she has all sorts of motor cars and wears orchids all winter! Well, she brought only $4.30! She was almost in tears about it and she offered to give the other 70 cents, if they'd let her, out of her husband's money. Everybody was anxious to hear why she'd failed to earn the full amount. What do you suppose she'd done? Pressed her husband's trousers?"

"She said she had started right in—for she could charge only ten cents a pair—and she knew there were only thirty days in a month. So she lined up all the trousers her husband owned and pressed them the first day. Then each day she pressed the pair he had worn the day before—and then she tried to persuade him to change his trousers at noon sometimes so she could press two pairs a day, but he refused. She was counting up the days, and at the rate she was going she couldn't possibly get the five dollars before the month was up! She made him pay her each day. Finally, near the end, in despair, she took all the pairs of trousers out of the closet again and, finding, she said, that they were a little wrinkled from hanging so long, she pressed them once more. It was that performance that ended her earning powers. Her husband said that a tailor was cheaper and did the work better."

"Mrs. Cullen—you know, she gives presents worth hundreds of dollars to the church every little while. She fairly keeps it running at times. Well, she sold magazine subscriptions! She said that she found all her friends already were subscribers for all the magazines she had for sale. Finally she had to canvass the streets, and yet in order to make up the five dollars she was compelled to sell three subscriptions to herself and then give away the magazines! We couldn't decide whether that was fair or not."

"Mrs. Briggs painted place cards! She said she spent most of the month in wondering what to do, and just a few days before last Wednesday she learned that a special friend of hers was giving a luncheon. So she told the friend that she'd paint place cards at 25 cents each! In ignorance, her friend took her offer, and she brought the place cards to show. She had to laugh at it herself, for she'd never painted a thing in her life before and she thought those simple little things would be awfully easy! There was a little red hill—she had just three color paints and didn't know what to mix for other colors—and on the red hill was a yellow house with blue trimmings. Those were the three colors—and all the embellishments were of the same colors. They were really unique."

"Mrs. Bradway is a dear little old woman who just drives around and looks sweet and dainty and goes to church. She made a contract with her son to weed his whole lawn for five dollars!"

"Actually, when it got to me to tell how I earned my five dollars I really felt ashamed that I'd done it so easily. It didn't seem right! So Miss Brown, who is studying music and has a time making ends meet, and I went into a corner and hid while we listened. For she had earned her money easily, too—just took the five dollars paid her for one Sunday's singing in the choir!"

"I wonder if all rich people feel sort of mean and incapable when they see other people working!"—Chicago Daily News.

And None of This. "I saw a man today in court who in his work has just material to burn."

"What's his specialty?" "He's a firebug."

A Decent Campaign.

No one has ever impeached the designation of President Taft as a clean, high-minded, honorable gentleman. Of Governor Wilson it is superfluous to say that the same designation applies. Why, then should we not have a clean, high-minded campaign? Or rather, how can we have anything else? There is a sharp difference between the two candidates, both in general aim and in detail. These differences are set out in the respective platforms of the parties that they represent, as well as in the known tendencies of the parties. The people of the country were never in better mood for a contest on principle.

For two years, at least, the determination of a large part of the people to have certain things done by their government has been plainly manifest. The Democratic party represents this tendency, while the Republican party represents the leaning toward tradition and reluctance to change. So there is everything, both in the parties arrayed and the temper of the people, to call for a pure contest that shall appeal to reason, and, to repeat, the people are fortunate in having as the candidates two men, either of whom would be a credit to any nation as a chief executive, comments the Indianapolis News.

The Chicago Record-Herald notes that often in private and public conversation is heard the remark that the nomination of Wilson and Marshall and of Taft and Sherman insures one thing at least—a dignified, respectable, clean campaign. In keeping, it urges a series of appeals to reason, experience and national good sense. We heartily believe that the event will realize the wish. Of course there is the Bull Moose party, if it succeeds in materializing and the chief Bull Moose, whose stock in trade is violent epithets. But should he vex the air again, we believe the people of the country are so wearied and surfeited with the two months of him they have had, that they will turn a deaf ear, and, instead, will listen to what may be said in sobriety and seriousness concerning the future management of their affairs, and will weigh the demonstrations that shall be made as to the application of remedies for things which need remedy.

So, in spite of the most that may threaten, we think the people are to be congratulated on the approach of one of the sanest and most dignified presidential campaigns that their history records. It will also, in a measure, rehabilitate us in the eyes of the world for the recent months of one of the most disgraceful and degrading demonstrations that has ever accompanied the public affairs of a people.

County Fair Change.

The annual "cattle shows" that have become such a feature of our American life, got their start solely through the desire of ambitious farmers to get recognition for good work.

A man who was conscious that he was producing a high type or domestic animal, or of fruit or vegetables, naturally wanted to get some official certification for his achievement. Furthermore the competitive spirit urged him to try conclusions with his neighbors.

The award of agricultural fair premiums therefore became a means by which the scientific farmer could make known the excellence of his methods, and secure recognition fitted to the value of his product. It also became a means of stimulating his less ambitious neighbors, by the comparison between their lean and scrawny animals and the fat aristocrats of the more successful neighbor's breeding.

The county fair was thus the original and primitive attempt of the farming community to elevate its industrial methods. Its educative influence was necessarily only very general and spasmodic. Its educational phrases have today been largely succeeded by the more systematic and thorough training of the agricultural college and the high school.

Today the agricultural fair has become largely a rural festival holiday. The farmer boys instead of hanging around the cattle sheds to see who is producing the best milkers, are more likely to be found at the strength testers or throwing little rings over canes, or competing to see which shall get the company of the pretty girls of the neighborhood on the grand stand for the races.

All this does not necessarily mean degeneracy. All work and no play used to make Jack Cornfussels a dull

Sam Sanderson Says:

That the Jeans of Ark are not all dead yet.

boy. Even if the agricultural fair has lost something of its primary mission as an educative force, the gospel of technical training for the farm boy is preached at every cross roads, and new schools for his benefit are opening daily. Give the farmer's boy his hour of jocosm and care free merriment!

Railroad Death Roll.

While our country is having such terrible railroad fatalities, they seem to get along in Europe with very few serious accidents. Perhaps this would be considered terribly unprogressive in the United States.

In many ways one would think that railroad traveling would be more hazardous in Europe. The rolling stock is very much lighter than ours. If subjected to the bumps and strains of American railroading, it would be reduced to kindling wood very much quicker.

There are two reasons for our bad railroad record, one of which the American people are not to blame for, and one of which is the result of national temperament.

Distances in this country are so much greater, that hastier and flimsier construction has been necessary to provide transportation. Perhaps this could not have been avoided.

But when it comes down to American haste, the results appear in our annual death roll. Our people expect to make the same time on single track railroads incompletely equipped that can be made on highly safeguarded lines.

Wilson on Bryan.

Bryan may support Wilson as a matter of policy, but it will be hard for his followers to do so. In 1907 Wilson thought Bryan a wild man of Borneo, and wrote a letter to the president of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad on the subject. The letter is as follows:

"Princeton, N. J., April 29, 1907.
"My Dear Mr. Joline—Thank you very much for sending me your address at Parsons, Kan., before the board of directors of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway. I have read it with relish and entire agreement. Would that we could do something at once dignified and effective to knock Mr. Bryan once and for all into a creaked hat. Cordially and sincerely yours.

"WOODROW WILSON."

William Jennings Bryan says Wilson's plurality over Taft will be two million. It will be remembered that in July, 1896, July, 1900, and July, 1908, Mr. Bryan was elected by overwhelming pluralities, only to be buried under an avalanche of ballots in November of each of these years. Four years ago Mr. Bryan was as hopeful as ever. President Taft's popular plurality over Bryan was a million and a quarter votes.

Champ Clark had a majority in the democratic national convention and in the popular primaries, yet he was not nominated. He led on thirty ballots and was, then, defeated. Wilson was not the choice of the convention, but the necessity under the two thirds rule.

There seems little likelihood that the population will settle down and do day's works until the Bull Moose, the Elephant, the Donkey, and the Tiger close up the quadrennial Hippodrome Nov. 5.

With 10,000 letters due, some of Gov. Wilson's correspondents must be content with picture post cards of Sea Girt.

Even a kick might seem a welcome attention to the Houn' Dawg, now occupied by transporting a large Baltimore tin can to the suburbs of Missouri.

It is said Congress may adjourn the last of this month, no doubt feeling that if they should stay in session any longer they might do some business.

The political prognosticators who are enjoying the job of electing Prof. Wilson president, should remember that presidents are elected in the cool of November and not in the heat of July.

The Democrats must squarely answer the question what shall become of the factories that would be nailed up under a tariff for revenue only.

The blazers the young folks are wearing look like blazes!

Editorialettes.

Attempts at suicide are not considered especially dangerous nowadays unless one shows that he means business by going up in an airship.

Because a man goes around with his hand in a sling, it is not the necessary conclusion that he hurt himself doing manual labor. He may have fallen down and cut himself while drying the dishes for his wife.

We are more forcibly impressed with the incongruity of the situation every time we read some of the mandates of Mr. Doolittle, chief of the national bureau of chemistry.

The season is approaching when Rush county fast horses will begin getting to the wire first.

There ought to be some kind of a quip made about the farmer who moves to town to buy a business merely for a place to loaf.

It is quite impossible to comprehend what a wife would say to the husband who stood on the street corner to listen to a band and missed his dinner.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

Brewery Shouters.

(Marion Chronicle.)

The Richmond Item loudly demands a sixth state ticket in Indiana. Naturally. The supremacy of the most corrupt and corrupting of all special interests, the liquor system, is at stake in the approaching Indiana election and the Item is one of the most servile organs of that interest, having gained a front seat in the liquoratic rathskillar of fame by fighting the battle of the saloons in Wayne county at the local option election of 1909, the only time the system has been menaced in Richmond. Naturally the Item is for any movement that will promote the welfare of the corrupt and corrupting special interest for which it fights at home and throughout the State, and therefore the suggestion that the Taggart machine is willing to provide a campaign fund to put a "republican" rump ticket in the field to save itself from extinction excites the enthusiasm of the Item.

The Murphys and the Taggarts and the Sullivans have their allies masquerading as republicans, helping them put over their plans on the people of Indiana, Illinois and New York. No paper in Indiana has battled more persistently than the Item in behalf of the Taggart organization in this State by keeping up a fire in the rear of the republican party, the only organizations which menaces the supremacy of this machine. The Item helped elect Marshall four years ago, and assisted in the repeal of the county local option law after success battling for the retention of saloons in its own city. The partnership between corrupt and politicalized big business and a newspaper of a certain type is well exemplified in the case of the Item, which, professing devotion to reform principles, has for four years been doing the dirty work of the Indiana liquor system, and is still on the job.

Eye Troubles

Brief spells of dizziness, pains in the brow and temples come from eyestrain. Glasses correctly fitted—perhaps just to wear while reading, studying, sewing, or other close work may be all that's required for permanent relief.

Taken in time the constant wearing of glasses is avoided. Delay means serious eye trouble later on, expensive and painful operation or the loss of vision.

SOCIETY NEWS

Miss Nettie Clark entertained the local chapter of the Psi Iota Xi at her home at the corner of Sexton and Fifth streets last evening.

Miss Bertha Walker was hostess to the members of the Emanon club at a pitch-in supper at her home in North Main street Tuesday evening.

The Misses Nelle and Cora Winship will entertain the members of the Embroidery club with a pitch-in supper at their home this evening.

Invitations have been issued for a dance to be given next Tuesday night in the Modern Woodmen hall by the Psi Iota Xi sorority. The Hubert Hanna orchestra of Bloomington will furnish the music and a number of visitors are expected to attend.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the New Salem M. P. church will meet next Wednesday, July 17, at 2 p. m. with Mrs. John Mock. Mrs. Elsie McKibben will be leader. This society was organized February, 1911, by Mrs. D. W. Gray of Michigan. Although few in number the society already has helped the cause of home missions much. Every member is earnestly requested to be present and help make it a good meeting. Everybody invited whether a member or not.

The lawn social given by the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the St. Paul M. E. church last evening on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Hargrove in Seventh street, was a most delightful event. Each member was entitled to one guest, and married members had their husbands as guests.

A luncheon was served by the light of Japanese lanterns which were used to illuminate the lawn. More than eighty people sat down to the delightful repast. Each member of the society prepared a part of the luncheon. During the luncheon music was furnished by the Sunday school brass band, directed by A. P. Wagner.

A very interesting program was rendered. Mrs. C. H. Parsons read an entertaining and instructive paper on American ideals. She received the closest attention during the reading. Miss Frances Frazee gave several charming readings and was applauded to the echo for her efforts.

As this is the end of the fiscal year for the society, the financial report for the year was read to the guests. The report showed that about two hundred and fifty dollars had been collected by the society during the year.

HARRIE JONES WILL OPEN IN CLEVELAND

Rushville Trainer Will Take Stable of 18 Horses Through Grand Circuit This Season.

STRING ON SMALL ONES, TOO

Harrie Jones, the Rushville trainer, will leave here about July 23, with a stable of horses to make the cities in the grand circuit. Mr. Jones will open this season in Cleveland, Ohio, the last week of this month. He expected to ship to Detroit and race first there, but the rains of the last two weeks here have delayed his training and made it impossible for him to get his horses in condition. In addition to his stable on the grand circuit, which he will drive himself, Mr. Jones will send a second stable over the smaller circuits. Gilbert Morton, his trainer, will be in charge of this stable. Mr. Jones expects to carry about eighteen horses in his string.

"I bring you another lamp," she said affably, setting her offering down on the bureau. "One ain't enough light to dress decently by. I have three," and she sank down on the side of the bed with the air of having established an intimacy, woman to woman, by this act of generous consideration.

"Them gentlemen," she continued, "are along on this hall with you and your pa. The old one's Judge Washburne, of Colusa, a pioneer that used to know Mr. Perley's mother way back in Sacramento in the fifties, and knew your pa real well when he was poor. It's sort of encouraging to think your pa was ever poor."

Rose laughed and turned sideways, looking at the speaker under the arch of her uplifted arm. There were hairpins in her mouth and an up-whirled end of blond hair protruded in a gleaming scattering of yellow over her forehead. She mumbled a comment on her father's early poverty, her lips showing red against the hairpins nipped between her teeth.

"And the other one," went on Cora, her eyes riveted on the hair-dressing, her subconscious mind making notes of the disposition of every coil, "his name's J. D. Buford. And I'd like you to guess what he is! An actor, a stage player. He's been playing all up the state from Los Angeles and was going down to Sacramento to keep an engagement there. It just tickles me to death to have an actor in the house. I ain't never seen one close to before."

The last hair-pin was adjusted and Miss Cannon studied the effect with a hand-glass.

"An actor," she commented, running a smoothing palm up the back of her head, "that's just what he looked like, now I think of it. Perhaps he'll act for us. I think it's going to be lots of fun being snowed up at Antelope."

The sound of a voice crying "Cora" here rose from the hallway and that young woman, with a languid deliberation of movement, as of one who obeys a vulgar summons at her own elegant leisure, rose and departed, apologizing for having to go so soon. A few minutes later, the hour of supper being at hand, Rose followed her.

She was descending the stairs when a commotion from below, a sound of voices, loud, argumentative, rising and falling in excited chorus, hurried her steps. The lower hall, lit with lamps and the glow of its stove, heated to a translucent red, was full of men. A current of cold could be felt in the hot atmosphere and fresh snow was melting on the floor. Standing by the stove was a man who had evidently just entered. Ridges of white lay caught in the folds of his garments; a silver hoar was on his beard. He held his hands out to the heat and as Rose reached the foot of the stairs she heard him say:

"Well, I tell you that any man that started to walk up here from Rocky Bar this afternoon must have been plumb crazy. Why, John L. Sullivan couldn't do it in such a storm."

To which the well-bred voice of Willoughby answered:

"But according to the message he started at two and the snow was hard-

HAY FEVER ATTACKS QUICKLY ENDED

Just Try Ely's Cream Balm, A Cleansing, Healing Antiseptic Cream.

Are you half sick for two or three months every summer with Hay Fever—violent sneezing spells, running at the nose, intense itching in the corners of the eyes, pain and soreness in the back of the throat, at nights a stuffed-up feeling in the head and an asthmatic wheezing in the throat and chest? If so, you can get almost instant relief by simply using a cleansing, healing antiseptic cream called Ely's Cream Balm.

Hay Fever is due to an extremely sensitive condition of the membrane lining the nose and throat. Dust, smoke and certain odors irritate this delicate inside skin. It becomes inflamed, causes a watery discharge from the nose and violent spasms of sneezing.

Ely's Cream Balm will relieve all these distressing symptoms in five minutes' time. It opens up the air passages, soothes, heals and strengthens the weakened, inflamed membranes, restores them to healthy, normal condition, so that you are not subject to Hay Fever attacks.

ly falling then. He must have got a good way, past the Silver Crescent, when the storm caught him."

A hubbub of voices broke out here, and, seeing her father on the edge of the crowd, Rose went to him and plucked his sleeve, murmuring:

"What's happened? What's going on?"

He took his cigar out of his mouth and turned toward her, speaking low and keeping his eyes on the men by the stove.

"The telegraph operator has just had a message sent from Rocky Bar that a man started from there this afternoon to walk up here. They don't think he could make it and are afraid he's lost somewhere. Perley and some of the boys are going out to look for him."

"What a dreadful thing! In such a storm! Do you think they'll ever find him?"

He shrugged, and replaced his cigar in his mouth.

"Oh, I guess so. If he was strong enough to get on near here they ought to. But it's just what the operator says. The fellow must have been plumb crazy to attempt such a thing. Looks as if he were a stranger in the country."

"It's a sort of quiet, respectable way of committing suicide," said the voice of the actor behind them.

Rose looked over her shoulder and saw his thin, large-featured face, no longer nipped and reddened with cold, but wreathed in an obsequious and friendly smile which furrowed it with deep lines. Her father answered him and she turned away, being more interested in the preparations for the search party. As she watched these she could hear the desultory conversation behind her, the actor's comments delivered with an unctuous, elaborate politeness which, contrasted with her father's gruff brevity, made her smile furtively to herself.

Supper was an animated meal that evening. The suddenly tragic interest that had developed drew the little group of guests together with the strands of a common sympathy. The judge and the actor moved their seats to the Cannons' table. Cora was sent to request the doctor—a young man fresh from his graduation in San Francisco who took his meals at the bachelor's table—to join them and add the weight of medical opinion to their surmises as to the traveler's chances of survival. These, the doctor thought, depended as much upon the man's age and physical condition, as upon the search party's success in finding him.

After supper they retired to the parlor, piled the fire high and sat grouped before it, the smoke of cigars and cigarettes lying about their heads in white layers. It was but natural that the conversation should turn on stories of the great storms of the past. Rose had heard many such before, but tonight, with the wind rocking the old hotel and the thought of the lost man heavy at her heart, she listened, held in a cold clutch of fascinated attention, to tales of the emigrants caught in the passes of the Sierra, of pioneer mining-camps relieved by mule trains which broke through the snow blockade as the miners lay dying in their huts, of men risking their lives to carry succor to comrades lost in their passage from camp to camp on just such a night as this.

The clock hand passed ten, and the periods of silence that at intervals had fallen on the watchers grew longer and more frequent, and finally merged into a stillness where all sat motionless, listening to the storm.

It was nearly eleven, and for fifteen minutes no one had spoken a word. Two of the dogs had come in and lain down on the hearth-rug, their noses on their paws, their eyes fixed brightly and ponderingly on the fire. In the midst of the motionless semicircle one of them suddenly raised its head, its ears pricked. With its muzzle elevated, its eyes full of awakened intelligence, it gave a low, uneasy whimper. Almost simultaneously Rose started and drew herself up, exclaiming, "Listen!" The sound of sleigh bells, faint as a noise in a dream, came through the night.

In a moment the lower floor was shaken with movement and noise. The bar emptied itself on to the porch and the hall doors were thrown wide. The sleigh had been close to the hotel before its bells were heard, and almost immediately its shape emerged from the swirling whiteness and drew up at the steps. Rose, standing back in the parlor doorway, heard a clamor of voices, a rising surge of sound from which no intelligible sentence detached itself, and a thumping and stamping of feet as the searchers staggered in with the lost traveler. The crowd separated before them and they entered slowly, four men carrying a fifth, their bodies incumbered with snow, the man they bore an unseen shape covered with whitened rugs from which an arm hung, a limp hand touching the floor. Questions and answers, now clear and sharp, followed them, like notes upon the text of the inert form:

"Where'd you get him?"

"About five miles below on the main road. One of the horses almost stepped on him. He was right in the path, but he was all sprinkled over with snow."

"He's not dead, is he?"

"Pretty near, I guess. We've pumped whisky into him, but he ain't shown a sign of life."

"Who is he?"

"Search me. I ain't seen him myself yet. Just as we got him the lantern went out."

There was a sofa in the hall and they laid their burden there, the crowd edging in on them, horrified, interested, hungrily peering. Rose could see their bent, expressive backs and the craning napes of their necks. Then a sharp order from the doctor drove them back, sheepish, tramping on one another's toes, bunched against the wall and still avidly staring. As their ranks broke, the young girl had a sudden, vivid glimpse of the man, his head and part of his chest uncovered. Her heart gave a leap of pity and she made a movement from the doorway, then stopped. The lost traveler, that an hour before had almost assumed the features of a friend, was a complete stranger that she had never seen before.

He looked like a dead man. His face, the chin up, the lips parted under the fringe of a brown mustache, was a marble white, and showed a gray shadow in the cheek. The hair on his forehead, thayed by the heat, was lying in damp half-curved semicircles, dark against the pallid skin. There was a ring on the hand that still hung limp on the floor. The doctor, muttering to himself, pulled open the shirt and was feeling the heart, when Perley, who had flown into the bar for more whisky, emerged, a glass in his hand. As his eye fell upon the man, he stopped, stared, and then exclaimed in loud-voiced amazement:

"My God—why, it's Dominick Ryan! Look here, Governor"—to Cannon, who was standing by his daughter in the parlor doorway, "come and see for yourself. If this ain't young Ryan I'm a Dutchman!"

Cannon pushed between the intervening men and bent over the prostrate figure.

"That's who it is," he said slowly and unemotionally. "It's Dominick Ryan, all right. Well, by ginger!" and he turned and looked at the amazed innkeeper, "that's the queerest thing I ever saw. What's brought him up here?"

Perley, his glass snatched from him by the doctor who seemed entirely indifferent to their recognition of his patient, shrugged helplessly.

"Blest if I know," he said, staring aimlessly about him. "He was here last summer fishing. But there ain't no fishing now. God, ain't it a good thing that operator at Rocky Bar had the sense to telegraph up!"

CHAPTER V.

Nurse and Patient.

When Dominick returned to consciousness he lay for a space looking directly in front of him, then moved his head and let his eyes sweep the walls. They were alien walls of white plaster, naked of all adornment. The light from a shaded lamp lay across one of them in a soft yet clear wash of yellow, so clear that he could see that the plaster was coarse.

There were few pieces of furniture in the room, and all new to him. A bureau of the old-fashioned marble-topped kind stood against the wall opposite. The lamp that cast the yellow light was on this bureau; its globe, a translucent gold reflection revealed in liquid clearness in the mirror just behind. It was not his own room nor Berny's. He turned his head farther on the pillow very slowly, for he seemed sunk in an abyss of suffering and feebleness. On the table by the bed's head was another lamp, a folded newspaper shutting its light from his face, and here his eyes stopped.

A woman was sitting by the foot of the bed, her head bent as if reading. He stared at her with even more intentness than he had at the room. The glow of the lamp on the bureau was behind her—he saw her against it without color or detail, like a shadow thrown on a sheet. Her outlines were sharply defined against the illumined stretch of plaster—the arch of her head, which was broken by the coils of hair on top, her rather short neck, with some sort of collar blinding it, the curve of her shoulders, rounded and broad, not the shoulders of a thin woman. He did not think she was his wife, but she might be, and he moved and said suddenly in a husky voice:

"What time is it?"

The woman started, laid her book down, and rose. She came forward and stood beside him, looking down, the filaments of hair round her head blurring the sharpness of its outline. He stared up at her, haggard and intent, and saw it was not his wife. It was a strange woman with a pleasant, smiling face. He felt immensely relieved and said with a hoarse carefulness of utterance:

"What time did you say it is?"

"A few minutes past five," she answered. "You've been asleep."

"Have I?" he said, gazing immovably at her. "What day is it?"

"Thursday," she replied. "You came here last night from Rocky Bar. Perhaps you don't remember."

"Rocky Bar!" he repeated vaguely, groping through a haze of memory. "Was it only yesterday? Was it only yesterday I left San Francisco?"

"I don't know when you left San Francisco," the newspaper cracked and bent a little, letting a band of light fall across the pillow. She leaned down, arranging it with careful hands, looking from the light to him to see if it were correctly adjusted.

"Whenever you left San Francisco," she said, "you got here last night. They brought you here, Perley and some other men in the sleigh. They found you in the road. You were half-frozen."

"What is this place?"

"Antelope," said the woman. "Perley's Hotel at Antelope."

"Oh, yes," he answered with an air of weary recollection, "I was going to walk there from Rocky Bar, but the snow came down too hard, and the wind—you could hardly stand against it! It was a terrible plumb. Perley's Hotel at Antelope. Of course, I know all about it. I was here last summer for two weeks fishing."

She stretched out her hand for a glass, across the top of which a book rested. He followed the movement with a mute fixity.

"This is your medicine," she said, taking the book off the glass. "You were to take it at five but I didn't like to wake you."

She dipped a spoon into the glass and held it out to him. But the young man felt too ill to bother with medicine and, as the spoon touched his lips, he gave his head a slight jerk and the liquid was split on the counterpane. She looked at it for a rueful moment, then said, as if with gathering determination,

"But you must take it. I think perhaps I gave it wrong. I ought to have lifted you up. It's easier that way," and before he could answer she slipped her arm under his head and raised it, with the other hand setting the rim of the glass against his lips. He swallowed a mouthful and felt her arm gliding from behind his head. He had a hazy consciousness that a perfume came from her dress, and for the first time he wondered who she was. Wondering thus, his eyes again followed her hand putting back the glass, and watched it, white in the gush of lamplight, carefully replacing the book. Then she turned toward him with the same slight, soft smile.

"Who are you?" he said, keeping his hollowed eyes hard on her.

"I'm Rose Cannon," she answered. "Rose Cannon from San Francisco."

"Oh, yes," with a movement of comprehension, the name striking a chord of memory. "Rose Cannon from San Francisco, daughter of Bill Cannon. Of course I know."

He turned his head away from her and said dryly and without interest: "I thought it was some one else."

She bent down and said, speaking slowly and clearly as though to a child:

"The storm has broken the wires, but as soon as they are up, papa will send your mother word, so you needn't worry about that. But we don't either of us know your wife's address. If you could tell us—"

She stopped. He had begun to frown and then shut his eyes with an expression of weariness.

"That doesn't matter," he said. "Don't bother about it. Let her alone." Again there was one of those pauses which seemed to him so long. He gave a sigh and moved restlessly, and she said:

"Are your feet very painful?"

"Yes, pretty bad," he answered.

"What's the matter with them?"

"They were frost-bitten, one partly frozen."

"Oh—" he did not seem profoundly interested. It was as if they were some one else's feet, only they hurt violently enough to obtrude themselves upon his attention. "Thank you very much," he added. "I'll be all right to-morrow."

He felt very tired and heard, as in a dream, the rustle of her dress as she moved again. She said something about "supper" and "Mrs. Perley coming," and the dark, enveloping sense of stupor from which he had come to life closed on him again.

Some time later on he emerged from it and saw another woman, stout and matronly, with sleekly parted hair, and an apron girt about her. He asked her, too, who she was, for the fear that he might wake and find his wife by his bedside mingled with the pain of his feet, to torment him and break the vast, dead restfulness of the torpor in which he lay.

It broke into gleams of interest and returning consciousness during the next two days. He experienced an acuter sense of illness and pain, the burning anguish of his feet and a fevered misery of his body, bitten through with cold, brought him back to a realization of his own identity. He heard the doctor murmuring in the corner of "threatened pneumonia" and understood that he was the object threatened. He began to know and separate the strange faces that seemed continually to be bending over him, asking him how he felt. There was the doctor, Perley, Bill Cannon, and the old judge and three different women, whom he had some difficulty in keeping from merging into one composite being who was sometimes "Miss Cannon," and sometimes "Mrs. Perley," and then again "Cora."

When on the fourth day the doctor told him that he thought he would "pull through" with no worse ailment than a frozen foot, he had regained enough of his original vigor and impatience under restraint to express a determination to rise and "go on." He was in pain, mental and physical, and the ministrations and attentions of the satellites that so persistently revolved round his bed rasped him into irritable moodiness.

The doctor laughed at his desire to "move on." The storm was still raging and Antelope was as completely cut off from the rest of the world as if it were an uncharted island in the unknown reaches of the Pacific. Propping the invalid up among his pillows, he drew back the curtain and let him look out through a frost-painted pane on a world all sweeping lines and skurrying eddies of white. The drifts curled crisp edges over the angles of roofs, like the lips of breaking waves. The glimpse of the little town that the window afforded showed it cowering under a snow blanket, almost lost to sight in its folds.

"Even if your feet were all right, you're tied here for two weeks anyway," said the doctor, dropping the curtain. "It's the biggest storm I ever saw, and there's an old timer that hangs round the bar who says it's as bad as the one that caught the Donner party in forty-six."

The next day it stopped and the world lay gleaming and still under a frosty crust.

That afternoon Dominick, clothed in an old bath-robe of the doctor's, his swathed feet hidden under a red rug drawn from Mrs. Perley's stores, was promoted to an easy chair by the window. The doctor, who had helped him dress, having disposed the rug over his knees and tucked a pillow behind his back, stood off and looked critically at the effect.

"I've got to have you look your best," he said, "and you've got to act your prettiest this afternoon. The young lady's coming in to take care of you while I go my rounds."

SALUTED COLORS HE LOVED

Patriotic Action of Old Man Made Deep Impression on Soldiers From the Front.

There is so much that is painful and distressing about war that every soldier who has served at the front may bring back with him many memories that he would gladly forget. But there are gracious and touching incidents as well, one of which a Companion subscriber who fought through the Civil war thus recalls:

"Just after the second Battle of Bull Run and that of Chantilly, while the Union army lay near Alexandria and Fairfax Court House, a certain Massachusetts battery was ordered back to Washington to help garrison the capital.

"On the outskirts of Alexandria the column was halted, with its head opposite a little story-and-a-half cottage surrounded by an unpainted picket fence. As the halt was ordered, the door of the cottage opened, and old, white-haired man came down the steps toward the road with his hand raised toward the flag was carried as the guidon of the battery.

"The color-bearer released the staff from its socket and lowered it to the ground, and the old man, who had by this time come up to the line, drew the flag toward him, reverently raised it to his lips, turned, and without a word walked back into house.

The incident made a deep impression on the men who saw it. It meant more to those soldiers, who were bearing the brunt of a hard campaign, than a score of eloquent addresses on patriotism and the love of country. Who the old man was we never knew." —Youth's Companion.

Mrs. M. A. McLaughlin, 512 Jay St., LaCrosse, Wis., writes that she suffered all kinds of pains in her back and hips on account of kidney trouble and rheumatism. "I got some Foley Kidney Pills and after taking them for a few days there was a wonderful change in my case, for the pain entirely left my back and hips and I am thankful there is such a medicine as Foley Kidney Pills." GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Gray and Faded Hair to Its Natural Color.

"It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a 'sage tea' and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using 'sage tea' for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary 'sage tea' made by our grandmothers.

The growth and beauty of the hair depends on a healthy condition of the scalp. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly kills the dandruff germs which rob the hair of its life, color and lustre, makes the scalp clean and healthy, gives the hair strength, color and beauty, and makes it grow.

CORTLEYOU CALLED TO GIVE TESTIMONY

Senate Committee Wants to Know About 1904.

Washington, July 11.—By his admission before the senate committee investigating presidential campaign expenditures that much important documentary evidence as to the contributions for expenditures in the campaign of 1904 had been burned, Thomas Taggart, who was chairman of the Democratic national committee in that campaign, when Judge Alton B. Parker was the Democratic nominee, aroused no end of interest and comment.

There have been many inquiries at the senate committee room for copies of Mr. Taggart's testimony. The inquirers wanted to get the details of the declaration of the destruction of the Democratic party records of that campaign, but the complete testimony did not shed light beyond that cast by the newspaper accounts of Mr. Taggart's statements.

Interest now centers in testimony to be given by George B. Cortleyou tomorrow. Mr. Cortleyou is expected to tell about the campaign contributions and expenditures of 1904, when he was Republican chairman by the appointment of Colonel Roosevelt, and when he left the department of commerce and labor to manage the campaign of his chief for re-election, Judge Parker, who was the candidate of the Democrats in 1904, made wholesale charges in the closing days of the campaign that the Republican committee that year levied heavy tribute on the corporations to build up a campaign fund.

The Meanest Thief.

Aurora, Ill., July 11.—Henry Artlip, hearing a cry for help from the bank of the Fox river, ran down to the edge of the stream, learned a man was drowning, and plunged into the water. In his haste to make the rescue he forgot to leave his watch and $9 in cash in the custody of some trustworthy person. When he came out and started to put on his hurriedly discarded clothing he found he had been robbed.

The Iowa state Republican convention refused to indorse the national ticket and the Chicago platform. The convention left the issue to the "conscience of the individual voter."

Old Parties Come In for Bitter Denunciation.

ALL ALIKE GIVEN BAD NAME

Neither the President Nor His Immediate Predecessor Are Spared in the Temporary Chairman's Keynote Speech, While Men Behind Wilson Boom Come in For Equal Attack at Prohibitionists' National Convention.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 11.—In his keynote speech, after being inaugurated as temporary chairman of the national prohibition convention here, the Rev. Clinton N. Howard of Rochester, N. Y., launched forth into a warm attack on the present administration, Theodore Roosevelt and the men behind the Wilson boom.

Chairman Howard declared President Taft had given in to the liquor trust as had no other chief executive of the nation, and that there was no chance that the liquor traffic could be halted during the "silent plank" of the Republican platform. Roosevelt, he asserted, was more unfit for prohibition support than any other candidate now in the field, because of his record, principles and habits.

Secretary Caldwell in the call for the convention said: "The prohibition party is the only one that contains the plank 'Thou shalt not.'" This call declared the Democratic and Republican parties responsible for "every law with a snake in it on the statute books," "every looted public treasury," "every unconvicted robber from Tammany Hall to that maelstrom of corruption around the Golden Gate."

May Change Party Name.

There is decidedly an "insurgent" element in the convention and some of the sessions are expected to be marked by lively controversy. Questions relating to woman suffrage, the initiative, referendum and recall, and a proposed change in the name of the party undoubtedly will provoke debate. Some of the delegates are insisting that the name of the party be changed to "Progressive" and declare that the prohibitionists were the first real progressives in the national political field.

Candidates for first place most mentioned are: Eugene W. Chapin of Arizona, the candidate four years ago; A. J. Houston of Texas, descendant of General Sam Houston of the Alamo; Charles Scanlon of Pennsylvania, and O. W. Stewart of Chicago. Aaron W. Watkins of Ohio is about the only man mentioned for vice president. He was the candidate for second place four years ago.

THE TARIFF BOARD

Subject of a Fight Between the Senate and the House.

Washington, July 11.—The big sundry civil appropriation bill was completed and acted upon favorably by the senate appropriation committee. The bill carried $109,577,414 as it came from the house. The increase made by the senate committee will add $1,500,000 to the total amount. The most important of these increases is $225,000 for continuing the work of the tariff board. The house sought to end the activities of the tariff board by withholding an appropriation for its maintenance. The house is stubborn on this proposition, and the action of the senate committee in adding the $225,000 means there will be a fight which will involve the life of the president's tariff board.

The charts were prepared by the federal government.

The Aquaplane, Most Dangerous and Spectacular of All Water Devices, a Feature of Cadillagua

Mason Rumney of the Detroit Country club on the aquaplane, traveling thirty-six miles an hour.

Balancing oneself on the narrow steel girder of a forty story skyscraper is an easy and safe task compared to performing on the aquaplane. Imagine yourself riding through the water on a narrow plank drawn by a high powered motorboat, cutting the waves at a speed of forty miles an hour.

It takes nerve to give an aquaplane exhibition. The three best and most fearless aquaplane stars will show their skill during Cadillagua, the last week in July, at Detroit. Mason Rum-ney of the Detroit Country Club has made a special hobby of trying this perilous and difficult feat. How he manages to balance himself on his plane when rushing through the water at the highest speed motorboats can attain is a question that few have been able to explain. Of course he gets an occasional spill, but he is a great swimmer and has little concern about whether he is dislodged from the plane or whether he sticks on. Exhibitors of aquaplanes provide most thrilling sport for the onlookers.

in her careful search and breathed a spell. She at first scouted the theory, she said, that Mrs. Richie would travel seven or eight miles, the distance from Mrs. Richie's to Mrs. Holman's, in order to take eighteen turkeys.

But when Mrs. Holman's attempts to locate her lost turkeys proved fruitless, she determined to follow up the inference that had been given her and see if they were at Mrs. Richie's.

Enter the sleuth. Taking another woman with her, Mrs. Holman drove down to the Richie farm Tuesday. She had been warned to be on the alert, but she thought nothing of any need for a revolver. As she drove down through the field to Mrs. Richie's home, Mrs. Holman recognized six of her turkeys in the field, she declared. She says she knows this particular strain, because of their breeding, and also because of the manner in which she marked them.

Mrs. Holman resorted to a bit of strategy. She accepted the warning that had been given here and approached Mrs. Richie cautiously. She did not openly accuse Mrs. Richie of stealing her turkeys, even though she had seen them in the field as she drove to the house. She inquired about the farm which was said to be for sale, and as the conversation lead on friendly enough she broached the subject of chickens and turkeys.

Mrs. Holman was passing under an assumed name. She asked Mrs. Richie if she knew where she might be able to buy some turkeys and chickens of fancy strain as she desired to go into the business. Mr. Richie directed her to Mrs. Lot Holman, the woman with whom she was talking but was not aware of it.

That, Mrs. Holman declares, was enough to convince her that her turkeys had been stolen, and she left immediately for her home intent on returning the next day in quest of them when she would be prepared for most any sort of treatment. She acquainted Mr. Holman with the facts, and yesterday she and her husband returned to the Richie farm to claim what they believed was theirs.

When Mrs. Holman openly accused Mrs. Richie of taking the turkeys and demanded their return, Mrs. Richie ordered Mr. and Mrs. Holman off the farm. When Mr. and Mrs. Holman showed no disposition to leave without the turkeys, Mrs. Richie called to her son to bring her revolver, according to Mrs. Holman.

"But I was not one to be bluffed out so easily," said Mrs. Holman over the telephone this morning. "and I walked back to my buggy and pulled out my gun. I told her I was as good at that as she was, and that if she wanted to shoot, just pop away and I would do likewise."

Developments of the next few minutes prove conclusively that Mrs. Holman got Mrs. Richie's "goat." Mrs. Richie backed down, according to Mrs. Holman's story, and told her husband they could have the turkeys if they wanted them.

"Will you likely bring any charges against Mrs. Richie?" was asked Mrs. Holman.

"I hardly think I will," replied Mrs. Holman, "but I told her that if she ever did me harm I would have her up in a justice of the peace court, because she could not bluff me."

Mrs. Holman succeeded in getting only four of her turkeys out of the eighteen which disappeared, she said. She and her husband had to go out and catch them. Mrs. Holman declared that it was apparent an effort had been made to mark the turkeys so they would not be known to their owner. She said their wings had been clipped and their legs had been marked with green paint.

While living near Milroy, Mrs. Richie had trouble but escaped without any difficulty. She was charged in the squire's court with having stolen her neighbor's chickens. They disappeared on Saturday night, and when the neighbor returned home after having filed the affidavit, he found the chickens back in the yard. Mrs. Richie was tried on the affidavit but was freed because her neighbor could not prove her allegations. It will be remembered this trial occasioned a lot of talk, and was the center of attraction at Milroy the day that it transpired.

WORKERS HOLD TIDINGS SOCIAL

Members of C. W. B. M. Auxiliary of Ben Davis Creek Church Have Delightful Time.

GUESSING CONTEST PLEASING

Missionary Tells Incidents From Life In The Work And Good Program is Carried Out.

(By Mrs. J. D. Austen.)

The C. W. B. M. people of Ben Davis Creek church, en masse, recognized June as "Tidings Month." Not that the June number of the "Missionary Tidings" is better than the May, July or any other number of the twelve perfectly splendid ones, which the competent editor and her corp of able assistants gives us through Uncle Sam's agency; for each number is well worth much more than the few cents asked for it, but June is the month devoted to extra effort, in behalf of this most excellent little magazine, that whereby it may enter and become acquainted with the inmates of many homes outside missionary circles.

Some one will say I have, that backwards; but, no, it is as I intended it, for the pages are fairly alive with the people included in the list of missionary workers and those preparing for work at home and abroad. You open a copy and the bright, attractive intelligent face of some worker greets you and almost seems to fairly speak to you and the subject of his chosen work. Glance down the page and you find an article from his or her pen which tells you much that you just wanted to know. You become deeply interested in this and other subjects and are really anxious for another "Tidings" to come.

Realizing what this dear little book means to us as members of the Ben Davis Creek auxiliary to the C. W. B. M. we decided to do something worth while this June. We had a talkfest and the result was plans for a "Tidings Social." This plan—a very simple yet efficient one—was carried out. Our chairman of the social committee, standing, together with her two assistants, divided the entire membership roll into sub-committees, each to give its whole attention and special effort to the work designated for it to do; for instance, program committee, refreshment committee, reception committee and invitation committee.

And just a word as to who were invited. We knew we must limit our efforts or we would find ourselves "hopelessly involved." Each lady member of our church and her daughters were invited; each person who had at any time been a member of our society; each member of said society was instructed to invite one guest who is a member of no society. We gave our hostess, Aunt Sarah Austen, a loved old lady, the privilege of inviting any one whom she pleased. The workers were faithful, the plans matured and consummated, the weather man was kind, and the invitations were accepted.

The program rendered was surprisingly good. Mrs. Mollie Austen called the large assembly to order and in well chosen and clearly defined words told those assembled our aim in enlivening our June efforts in a "Tidings Social." No woman went away wondering "what it was all about."

Miss Endora Shortridge of Glenwood, who has been laboring at Edwards, Miss., among the colored people, but is at present spending her vacation at her mother's home, gave one of her splendid talks on missionary work, especially along her line. She gave us an insight into the everyday life and work of the students and teachers of the institute, which would have entirely overthrown an idea that there is "nothing doing" at that decidedly busy place.

Then Miss Lola Gibbs, another near-by co-worker in His vineyard from Fairview, sang most beautifully and touchingly "The Story Must be Told." Since Miss Gibbs is preparing to enter the field as a singing evangelist we felt decidedly fortunate in procuring her services at our social. Other good things were on the program, but those mentioned were especially good.

During the social hour delightful refreshments consisting of cake and fruit consomme, with ice water was served to the guests. A guessing contest added much interest and caused much merriment. Mrs. Lola Cummins winning first prize, Miss Ada McConnell, second, and the "booby" was awarded to Mrs. Carrie Gray. Each guest was given a favor in the form of two large "G's" tied with a lavender ribbon and asked to guess its meaning. Much discussion and conjecture followed the pinning on of this little favor until the correct solution was discovered to be "Tidings in gs—Tidings."

Now, the very best part, if there was a best part, we sent a list of 45 new subscribers and 9 renewals to be placed on the regular mailing list and we do most certainly feel many times repaid for our earnest effort in working to create a wider knowledge of and heartier co-operation in the missionary field and its needs.

INCENDIARY SAID TO BE THE CAUSE

revolver three or four times to wake the neighborhood and get them to come to fight the fire, and that these were the shots Mr. Avery heard.

Mr. Avery contends, however, that he heard the two or three pistol shots before the house was ablaze and previous to the time Mr. Greely was aware of the fire.

Dr. Bell gives a graphic description of the escape from the burning building. He and Mrs. Bell were asleep in the east room on the second floor. Both were apparently awakened at the same time. The doctor grasped his wife by the hand and started down the stairway. He missed the first step and fell to the bottom. He then went to the dining room, where a pail of water was on a table, and took the pail upstairs. When he got to the second floor he found the entire floor a mass of flames.

Dr. Bell suffered a number of bruises on the head and face in falling down the stairway, and his hair was singed by the flames. He stated that Mrs. Bell was worse burned than he.

When the couple awoke, the flames seemed to be spreading over the bed they were occupying. It was a very narrow escape for both.
